WEAR A CARNATION ON MOTHERS' DAY

CITY-WIDE CAMPAIGN FOR FLOWER DISTRIBUTION BY WAR MOTHERS

A vigorous campaign has been started by the Golden Poppy Chapter, American War Mothers, for realizing funds for the relief and hospitalization work being carried on by them for all ex-service men and their families.

At the last meeting of the organization, held Friday, April 30, plans were completed for selling thousands of carnations, the following women to sell them at various stands in the city: Mrs. M. N. Ferguson, Mrs. Kinger, Mrs. Keef, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Smythe, Mrs. Wuillie, Mrs. Helback, Mrs. Paul Mason and Mrs. Wheeler.

Stands will be placed in prominent places in the down town sections, and several of the War Mothers have agreed to canvass outlying suburban cities. The carnations will be sold all day Saturday, May 8, from stands in Holzwasser's store, the U. S. Grant hotel, Y. M. C. A., Recreation Center and the Balboa theater. Saturday evening the women will conduct a drive at the Mission Beach casino.

These War Mothers, all mothers of service men, are making a great effort to make this the largest and most successful drive ever held by their organization, and it is expected that great benefit will be derived from the sale of the flowers to the generous public.

BACON STREET PAVING PROTESTED UNSATISFACTORY BETWEEN CAR TRACKS

The city council has been asked by a number of interested Ocean Beach residents not to accept the new paving on Bacon street on account of its unsatisfactory condition. The paving was only recently completed and is already beginning to sag and wave between the car tracks and on several of the corners along the thoroughfare. A special committee of engineers will advise a remedy for the situation.

CECIL O. CARL MOVES HIS ELECTRICAL STORE

To meet the steady and continuous growth in his electrical work, Cecil O. Carl has moved his headquarters to 1884 Bacon street, in the large store formerly occupied by Russell's Grocery. Contractor Carl is now better equipped than ever for furnishing anything and everything in the electrical line and estimates and particulars for house wiring are cheerfully furnished. The new phone number is Bayview 0054.

NOW'S THE TIME FOR CLEANING-UP BEACH DISTRICT

PROPERTY OWNERS, RESIDENTS, BUSINESS FOLKS, CAN WORK WONDERS

Now's the time for cleaning up the beach districts in preparation for the regular annual influx of visitors. Vacant lots, alleys, front and back yards and parking spaces should be cleaned of all litter, tin cans, rubbish and weeds. In many places a great deal can be accomplished by burning off the wild oats and rank growth of weeds, while tin cans, bottles and other like litter should be placed in boxes or barrels for collection by the city operating department.

Let's all get busy and show special civic pride in having our premises looking neat and orderly, and if neighbors will co-operate and do likewise, the residential and business sections will soon be highly creditable to all concerned and prove a wonderful assets for this splendid beach community.

It is suggested that the various civic organizations take active part in the clean-up movement with the appointment of special committees for furthering the campaign.

"TIDES OF PASSION" FILMED AT LA JOLLA AND BIRD ROCK

Manager Ralph Sunderhauf, of the Granada theatre, La Jolla, announces that "Tides of Passion," the screen version of Basil King's novel, "In the Garden of Charity," has been booked for an early June showing at the Granada theatre. This picture was filmed here in La Jolla and at Bird Rock by Commodore Stuart Blackton, and features Mae Marsh, supported by Ben Hendricks, Laska Winters, Ivor McFadden and Thomas Mills.

GRANADA THEATRE, LA JOLLA

"Miss Brewster's Millions," with Bebe Daniels and Warner Baxter in the leading roles, will be the feature attraction today, (Saturday only), May 8th, matinee and night. "Miss Brewster's Millions" is the story of a madcap maid who made a million. All she had to do was to squander a million in three months. But old Midas had nothing on Bebe. Everything she touched made money. You'll howl with glee at the stunts she does to grow poor. A Pathe Review, comedy and scenic will also be shown.

As a Mother's Day special offering, the Granada theatre is presenting Colleen Moore in "Irene," which will be on view two days, Sunday, Mother's Day, May 9th, and Monday, May 10th. "Irene" is Colleen's greatest comedy success, with the world's greatest fashion show. "Irene" is too big a show for anyone to miss—and just the kind you'll come back to laugh over again and again. On the same program the Granada will offer a Mutt & Jeff cartoon, a comedy and news reel.

Harold Lloyd in a popular re-issue of his famous comedy, "I Do" and "The Last Edition," a thrilling newspaper story, starring Ralph Lewis, forms the features for Tuesday and Wednesday, May 11 and 12. "I Do" is one of the comedies that made Harold Lloyd the comedy King that he is today. Mildred Davis, now Mrs. Harold Lloyd, is the charming bride and Harold the troubled bridegroom in "I Do," a comedy of the first year, that gives us this famed comedian at his very best. "The Last Edition" is a history-making theme as rich in "meat" as the "Magna Charta"—in short a classic of the newspaper world.

"The Vanishing American," Zane Grey's latest and greatest story, is the feature picture attraction for Thursday and Friday, May 13-14. The picture which co-stars Richard Dix and Lois Wilson, presents one of the biggest and most vital themes concerned with the history and civilization of the United States. Besides Miss Wilson and Mr. Dix, Noah Beery, Malcolm McGregor and Shannon Day appear in the picture, and a comedy and news will also be shown.

The board of education this week appointed Edward D. Roberts, assistant superintendent of the public schools of Cincinnati, to be the superintendent of San Diego schools beginning July 1, replacing Henry C. Johnson, head of the school system here for the last seven years.

Written for "The Beach News" By Pupils Under Direction of Miss Sarellen Morgan

On Monday the judges' committee came to our school and chose the prize posters. The posters were about kindness to animals. Jack Lilly and Norman Bilderback won first prizes. Doris Franks and Ben McMicken won second prizes.

Richard McNulty, 6B, gave a report on soil and its uses for the civic league program on Friday. He gave it very well.

The upper grades are much interested in the study of Greece, both ancient and modern.

Charles Miller, 6B, won the composition prize. The subject was Kindness to Animals. Vera Reama's paper was second. Bobby Gibson and Jesse Barnhill had honorable mention.

BACHELOR GIRLS' PARTY

The Bachelor Girls of San Diego enjoyed a beach party one evening last week. Swimming was followed by a supper on the sands. Among those present were Misses Marion Davis, Elizabeth Roberts, Betty Thomas, Grace Knapp, Beatrice Diffin, Bluebelle Ferbuson, Dorothy Aldrich, Jenne Anne Knapp, Margaret Ulyatt, Grace Davis, Helen Heskett, Thelma Griggs, Alyce Foster and Rachel Flatland.

JACK LOURIE'S BIRTHDAY

CELEBRATE BIG SALES BY JOHN P. MILLS ORGANZATION ON POINT LOMA

It is announced that sales totaling $1,183,719, or practically double a quota of $600,000 set, in a twelve weeks' period from February 1 to April 27, was a record celebrated by the John P. Mills organization this week at a dinner and dance given in the Golden Lion tavern. This record, said to be a high mark in San Diego subdivision sales, was made in Point Loma properties, largely of Sunset Cliffs sites which were placed on the market in March.

In an enthusiastic speech to his organization, nearly 300 strong, Mills congratulated the men and women on their individual and team work, declaring that this new sales record indicated the confidence the organization has earned in the community and that such confidence is a sacred trust. The golden rule, he said, is the measure to sell by.

An excellent program of entertainment was arranged by E. R. Mills, publicity director of the organization, and cash prizes and gold watches were awarded for leadership in sales. Another contest of eight weeks is now in progress, with the quota set at a half-million dollars.

PLANS PERFECTED FOR 100 FRAME HOUSES ON WONDERLAND SITE

A building permit was issued last Thursday to the California State Land Development Co., for the construction of one hundred frame dwellings on the old Wonderland site at the foot of Voltaire street between Abbott street and the ocean front. The project calls for a total investment of over $20,000, and will be somewhat similar to Coronado Tent City, with the more satisfactory exception that the cottages will be built of boards instead of canvas, being known as insulated frame cottages. Each dwelling will cost $200, and it is stated that work will be started at once and rushed to early completion.

New Government Measuring Device

In ancient times, it was the magic carpet; today it is the magic proving ring. This is a new device designed by the bureau of standards, the ring being able to measure the load in a testing machine, up to a maximum of more than 6,000 pounds. Capt. S. N. Petrenko of the engineering mechanics section, the inventor, is shown in the picture.

NOT A CAKE

This photograph, taken of a bride of the Black forest district of Germany, is very interesting. What looks like a cake is a crown or headdress, 12 inches in diameter and 8 inches high, weighing from 6 to 10 pounds, consisting of 10 rows of glass balls and beads in various colors and sizes, embellished with small mirrors and other glittering ornaments. It is worn by all maidens at festivities such as church, family, christening, wedding and social affairs. A bride wears this from early morning until the church ceremony and wedding dinner and until ten at night, when she dons housewifely garb to show her submission to her husband.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

United States District Attorney George J. Hatfield of San Francisco, recently secured an important ruling from the United States District court. The court held that protection of the Fourth Amendment against searches without a search warrant did not extend to farms; and that where prohibition agents while on farms apprehend the fumes of distillation coming from a house in which they can observe the occupants moving around they can place the occupants under arrest and make a search of the house under the control of the occupants on the theory that they are making an arrest for a felony committed within their presence. This decision will greatly aid prohibition agents in apprehending operators of illegal stills who have heretofore sought to throw a cloak of protection around their operations by operating their stills in dwelling houses on isolated farms.

People may brag as they will about the home-grown American shamrocks but J. H. Collins, of Manteca, San Joaquin county, claims to have backed the Irish national flower off the map in the discovery in his garden of a beautiful pink rose, in the center of which were two vivid green buds. He says it is the real "wild Irish rose" and he intends to try propigating the bush that produced the novelty for use at future year St. Patrick day's celebrations.

In California, the land of romance, there are few cities which have a more interesting and entertaining history than has Hanford, in the center of the vast San Joaquin valley. The pretty little city, couty seat of Kings county, is on a site ranged over half a century ago by bands of elk and antelope, and which is today surrounded by highly cultivated raisin vineyards, fruit orchards and vast acreage of dairy farms.

While no definite plans have yet been formulated, it is expected Yosemite's Diamond Jubilee Year will be celebrated with a fitting pageant arranged so as to co-ordinate with the celebration of the opening of the new Yosemite all-year highway up the Merced River Canyon and the completion of the first fifteen miles of paved road in Yosemite valley, both expected to be finished about August 1.

Auto stage service between Manteca and Oakland and Manteca and Sacramento is to be considerably increased, according to announcement made by the California Transit company. Several new stages are to be added to the service to care for the summer travel, and there will be extra cars from here to Oakland and to Stockton. The time table has been changed completely.

Tree planting in Dinuba has taken a decided spurt with the announcement by the Dinuba American Legion post of free trees and free planting in front of any property where the owner or tenant would agree to take care of the planted tree. The Legion post is providing any variety of tree free of charge. The movement has stimulated tree planting interest materially.

Mining with a road scraper is California's latest style of mineral production, introduced on a very small scale, to be sure, by Walter S. Hartwick, in charge of street improvement work at Jackson, Amador county. Cutting a new street in the "Skunk Hollow" section Hartwick is reported to have unearthed gold quartz valued at $25.

"California now has 14 per cent of all the crippled men and mentally deficient relics of the world war, and 17 per cent of all the tubercular patients within its borders for treatment and hospital care," stated Allen Bixby of Pasadena, commander of the Department of California for the American Legion.

A combination of a number of the largest rice growers in the United States, whereby immense interests will be joined for the production of rice in Colusa county, was revealed recently when articles of incorporation for a company known as Houx Brothers, Inc., were filed with Secretary of State Frank C. SCHOOL DAYS

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At Twenty-one Richard Le Gallienne Received His First Commission.

"AT THIS age came my first commission, from Mr. John Lane, to write a book on John Meredith. I had at this time said good-by to the accountant's office where I had been working, rented an old loft in an ancient office building in Liverpool and seriously, as they used to say, 'commenced author.'

I would hardly venture upon the task now, but one is afraid of nothing at twenty-one. So I wrote the book for Mr. Lane and, as a result of it, went up to London. It chanced that just at that moment one of our 'T. P.'s' (T. P. O'Connor) earliest successes, the Star, was about to lose one of its most valued contributors. Mr. Clement Shorter. His column on 'Books and Bookmen' was vacant and open to competition. I took my fling at it, fearfully, as one should essay some inaccessible flight. But, one incredible afternoon it was announced to me that I had been chosen to fill the giant's robe. I was to be paid for writing every Thursday about the books I loved; I was to have my pick of all the books that came into the office—and yet I was to be paid.—Richard Le Gallienne."

TODAY.—Mr. Le Gallienne is one of of the most distinguished poets and essayists of this age—so distinguished, in fact, that the writer recently came across the manuscript of one of his poems offered for sale by Thomas F. Madigan, the autograph dealer. When this happens to any writer he can be certain that he has already achieved the realms of posterity.

OVER THE LEFT

AMONG children it is common after making a false statement to say "over the left." This is frequently uttered in so low a tone that the person addressed cannot hear it; but in the child's mind the "over the left" takes away, or neutralizes, the sin of the lie. If the words are uttered so as to be heard the hearer at once knows that the statement just made is not to be taken as a true one. Among adults, too, the words "over the left" are not infrequently added to a statement to convey the idea that it is to be taken in just an opposite sense; for instance, they change a laudatory statement into a sarcastic comment.

The idea of the power of magical inversion in "over the left" comes entirely from the primitive superstition with regard to right hand and left hand—an idea applied by extension to the right and left of the entire body. The idea, in brief, is that as the right hand is the "right" hand to do things with, the left hand consequently the wrong one, it naturally follows that good resides on the right and evil on the left.

In former times the words "over the left" were considered much more seriously by adults than they are now and believed capable of changing a blessing into a very potent curse. In 1705 one Bevell Waters, having lost a suit in the court at Hartford, Conn., said to the bench as he left the room: "God' bless you all—over the left shoulder." The court took expert testimony upon the remark from the two ministers of the two Hartford churches, who declared that Waters had uttered "the words of a curse the most contemptible that can ordinarily be used." Whereupon the culprit was heavily fined.

WHO SAID

"O would I were a boy again,
When life seemed formed of sunny years,
And all the heart then knew of pain
Was wept away in transient tears!"

MARK LEMON, one of the great British humorists of the past century and the author of the lines quoted, is chiefly remembered in the United States as one of the foremost foreign critics and detractors of President Abraham Lincoln, during the Civil war.

Lincoln and Lemon were born in the same year and died within five years of each other. Until the former's death the latter never missed an opportunity to ridicule his handling of the affairs of the United States. When Lincoln died, however, and the wisdom of his course had become apparent, Mark Lemon was one of the first to pen an apology for his criticism. This is in the form of a poem and its obvious sincerity and easy style make it worth reading.

In addition to being a humorous writer Mark Lemon was well known in his day as a capable playwright. During his lifetime he supplied the London stage with more than 60 farces, melodramas and comedies. When the magazine Punch was established in 1841 Lemon became joint editor with Henry Mayhew, and later he was sole editor of the publication. It was in this satirical paper that most of Lemon's jibes at Lincoln were published.

Lemon also achieved some success as a free-lance writer. He contributed to the Illustrated London News, to Dickens' Household Words, Once a-Week, and other periodicals. Among his later works are several novels of average merit. Of all Lemon's works his claim to fame rests most securely upon his work as editor of Punch.—Wayne D. McMurray.

Mother's Cook Book

HEALTHFUL DISHES

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain;
And spite old sorrow and older sinning
And puzzles forecasted and possible pain,
Take heart with the day, and begin again. —Susan Coolidge.

MOTHERS of families should remember to serve onions freely to the whole family, especially to the children. As a seasoning or flavor vegetable, the onion is invaluable, and served as a vegetable at least twice a week, the family will keep in the best of health.

Cream of Onion Soup.

Heat a quart of milk, add two tablespoonfuls of butter and two of flour that have been cooked together, and two cupfuls of cooked onions that have been mashed and put through a strainer. Season with salt, cayenne and a bit of grated cheese. Serve hot with croutons.

Celery Sandwiches.

Mix one cupful of finely chopped celery with one cupful of chopped Jonathan apples and one cupful of chopped English walnut meats. Moisten with mayonnaise. Spread between thin slices of nut bread. Serve with cold roast pork, chicken or turkey.

Onion Salad.

Slice a Spanish onion quite thin, cover with French dressing, adding a teaspoonful of tomato catsup, salt, cayenne, a little vinegar or lemon juice.

Sauce for Fish.

Add grated horseradish to season, to one cupful of thick sour cream. Season with salt, a dash of cayenne and sugar, beat until well-blended and serve with fish, either boiled, steamed or canned salmon.

IN ANY SEASON

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

MY MOTHER'S mother had a way
Of saying things that others say,
But saying them a whole lot better.
I never saw her write a letter,
I never heard her make a speech,
I never heard her really preach,
And yet she said, well I remember:
"The flowers are never out of reach,
I've found them even in December."

She looked for flowers all the year,
And always found the flowers here
When others thought the summer over.
It's easy in the time of clover
To find the blossoms by the wall;
But, when the leaves began to fall,
Perhaps with drifting snow around them,
She looked for flowers, after all,
And mother's mother always found them.

She found them even in her grief,
Yes, she would lift some fallen leaf,
And find some bud forever starting,
Some comfort in the hour of parting.
In every trouble she would find
Some reason for content of mind;
Yes, even in the darkness groping,
When hearts were sore, and eyes were blind,
She always found some cause for hoping.

Her back was bent, her hair was gray,
Yet mother's mother had a way
Of always looking for the roses;
And there are more than man supposes,
It all has helped me quite a lot,
Not only June, but June or not—
I've always tried to find a reason,
However cold the weather got,
For being glad in any season.

AN ABBREVIATED STORY

THE SPORT

"MR. TWILLER SCRATCH?" asked Verna Binnion.

"The same," said Twiller Scratch.

"Oh, I'm so glad to find you in! Us girls are getting up a fund to teach foreign children in America their native language, so they can talk to their fathers and mothers in case the parents can't speak English, and if you would care to—"

"Delighted!" said Twiller Scratch heartily. And he made out a check for $50.

"The boss certn'y is a sport," the stenographer murmured admiringly to the bookkeeper.

During the next two hours Twiller Scratch bought a set of books entitled, "Eighty Thousand Selected Chinese, Siamese and Portuguese Proverbs," for $9 from a book peddler because the poor devil looked so hard up, subscribed $20 to a fund for sending overshoes to the Dgoo savages in Africa, and gave the office boy $10 for his birthday.

Then he went to lunch with Fred Osprey and insisted on paying the whole check, which came to $8.

"Twiller, you're a sport and everybody knows it," said Osprey as he patted him on the back.

"Not a-tall, not a-tall," said Scratch modestly, as he dropped a dollar bill into a burly beggar's overflowing tin cup.

And in the course of the afternoon he loaned Artie Slatcher $30 and gave a messenger boy a $2 tip.

That evening after dinner his wife said timidly, "Twiller, everything for the table's so high, and I've run a little short of money."

"Money! Money! Money!" snapped Scratch. "Didn't I just hand you a whole five-dollar bill the day before yesterday?"

And he dodged behind the evening paper and didn't come out again till his wife had gone to bed.

ONE-EIGHTH OF INCOME GOES FOR TAXES

The American people are paying about one-eighth of their total income for taxes—whether they are in the higher income brackets, or in the class which does not pay any taxes or file returns. The San Francisco Chronicle puts it this way:

"In 1924 the total income of people in the United States was 63½ billions. Taxes—national, state, municipal and all the rest, took eight billions. This means that out of each $10 you spent, you got only $8.75 and taxes took $1.25, no matter how loudly you may have pleaded poverty.

"In 1903, we gave up only one-fifteenth of our income. Now we give more than twice that much. Out of eight working days, the proceeds of one day must go to the government—federal and otherwise.

"If the small taxpayer could be presented with a bill once a year, showing just how much his taxes amount to, including not only direct taxes but all the indirect taxes skimmed off every commodity he buys, a howl would go up that could be heard on the planet Mars."

SAN DIEGO BOOSTED BY UNION LEAGUE CLUB WITH RADIO PROGRAM

The glorious attractions and advantages of San Diego were broadcasted from station KFSD at a big radio party given by the Union League Club of San Diego county at the U. S. Grant hotel last Monday night. It is understood that the radio program was to be put on the air from 8 o'clock to midnight, but through some misunderstanding, only two hours, from 9 to 11 o'clock, were devoted to broadcasting. However, the program had a far reaching effect, as telegrams received indicated that it was heard on the east coast and all through the middle west, while reception was acknowledged from Alaska and Canada.

TRACK STARS DISCOVERED

Not a single meet in which the University of Southern California track stars have engaged this season, has been devoid of a record performance on the part of some Trojan athlete, forms the startling information discovered by the statistic hounds who have delved into the performance for the season.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY UNION LEAGUE CLUB

The board of directors of the Women's Auxiliary to the Union League club held their first meeting last Thursday evening at 207 Electric building. The following officers were duly elected: President, Mrs. Kirk Smith (Katherine); first vice-president, Mrs. Albert J. Lee; second vice-president, Mrs. Otis B. Tout; secretary, Mrs. Dora Barstow; treasurer, Mrs. Schuyler Kelly. Membership committee and entertainment committee were appointed.

The charter membership list, composed of fifty well-known San Diego women, is already filled and closed, and many applications for membership have been received. They will be acted upon by the membership committee at the next meeting of the board of directors, which will be held next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at 207 Electric building, San Diego.

EIGHT VINES SUGGESTED FOR OCEAN BEACH

Written for "The Beach News"
By Miss Rose Morrison

These vines are recommended by the garden department of the Woman's Club of Ocean Beach:

1. Pink tecoma, almost evergreen, long blooming season.
2. Honeysuckle, fine when in bloom; needs training and space.
3. Cobaea Scandeus, holds over second year, beautiful large flower.
4. Blue bells, foliage and flowers delicate but hardy; very fine.
5. Ornamental grape, small leaf variety; evergreen.
6. Solanum, white or purple flower.
7. Wire vine, needs cutting back.
8. Asparagus vine.

GETTING ON WITH PEOPLE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

ATKINSON is having a rather serious time just now because he cannot get on with his instructor in zoology. Atkinson lives at some distance from the campus, and he enjoys both lying in bed in the morning until the last minute and then eating his breakfast in a leisurely manner. He has a good appetite. As a result he not infrequently arrives at the natural history building some minutes after the roll is taken and is therefore marked absent. The instructor, who is not always punctilious in keeping his own engagements, refuses to cancel the absence even when made aware of Atkinson's tardy arrival, and this procedure irritates the boy.

He wants to get out of the class; he wants to take up some other subject; he thinks the instructor unreasonable, and he can't get on with him. Last year it was the same in mathematics, and next year there will be some sort of clash in philosophy, for it has never occurred to Atkinson that he might adjust his own desires and preferences and idiosyncracies to suit his instructor. He might get up a little earlier in the morning, he might give a little less deliberate attention to his breakfast, he might hasten his steps when approaching the class room. In fact it would be quite possible for him to study his instructors at the same time as he is applying himself to his books, and do so, too, with marked profit to his final semester grades. The art of getting on with people hasn't yet appealed to him.

Potter is almost an exact duplicate of his father in physique and in temperament. Each one is arrogant and high-tempered and hard to get on with and hell bent to have his own way. As a result they are at loggerheads all the time. The boy is really all right, but when the father is domineering the son is insolent. Where there might be friendship and sympathy and companionship, there is constant working at cross purposes. The boy hates to go home. After an absence of two or three months he can get on with his father for a day or two, and then the storm breaks.

Neither one seems to have tried to understand the other, to bear with the other's foibles, to overlook his weaknesses, so there is constant wrangling and unhappiness, where there might be comfort and peace and satisfaction.

There is the old story of the man and his wife who were both firebrands but who seemed always to get on happily with each other. When asked how under such dangerous circumstances such happy results were attained the man replied:

"When she flashes fire, I throw on the water, and vice versa. We have agreed that only one of us shall get angry at a time, so there can never be a quarrel."

It is possible to get on with anyone if we will only study him carefully enough. The devil is said to have his good traits. Success in all lines, happiness itself, depends upon our learning to get on with people.

Electricity Flows Like Water

BYLLESBY ENGINEERING AND MANAGEMENT CORPORATION
ENGINEERS-MANAGERS

In the process of transmission, electrictiy has characteristics similar to a stream of water, in that the distance it can be transmitted and its volume depends entirely on the capacity of its source—the generating plant.

The first long distance transmission line was 13 miles in length, from the hydro-electric plant at Oregon City to Portland. This achievement was acclaimed a triumph less than 40 years ago. Today high voltage current is successfully transmitted 220 miles.

The establishment of large companies and the demand for electrical energy in the rural sections of our country has inspired this amazing development. The San Diego Consolidated Gas & Electric company is anxious that its customers receive the utmost benefit from this development, and has employed competent engineers to assist them, without charge or obligation, in solving their electrical problems.

Electricity now costs less than it did in 1913, while the cost of government is higher, and the average cost of other commodities has increased 65 per cent.

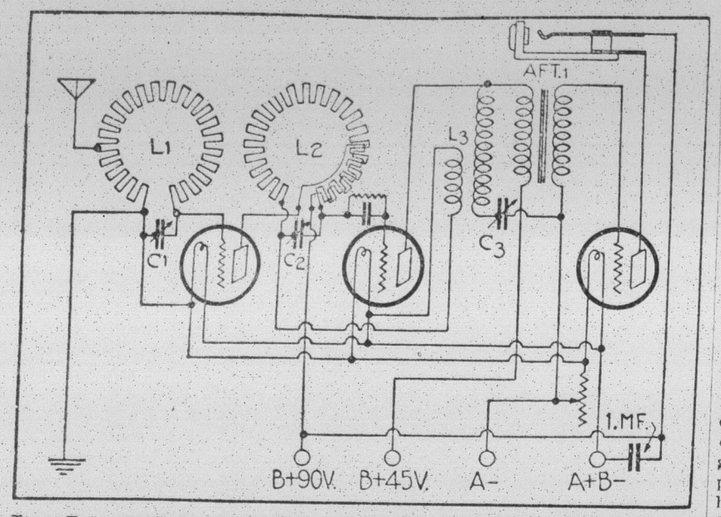
RADIO



Three-Tube Receiver Unexcelled for Distance, Volume and Tone. Square Wound Toroidal Coils Give the Circuit Selectivity.

Regeneration is one of the most wonderful things of radio, without which the entire broadcasting situation would not have reached its present day perfection. But, the regenerative receiver, as such, has almost become extinct because of its radiating qualities which spoil general reception for miles around, and because it is not selective enough to tune through a number of nearby broadcasting stations.

Regeneration is a great help to any radio set. When used in a sharp tuning receiver it will add sufficient volume to equal a nonregenerative set, using a greater number of tubes. The circuit shown here was devised by engineers of the All-American radio corporation to produce a three-tube set, employing regeneration and radio frequency amplification, combined. The radio frequency makes it a distance getter and prevents radiation, and the regeneration produces the volume and sensitiveness required to operate satisfactorily under 1926 conditions.

Make Sharper Tuning Set.

Toroidal coils make this combination possible, by eliminating interstage coupling. The magnetic field of the transformers is confined in the coils. The toroid coils also prevent the pick-up of local stations by the coils themselves and make a much sharper tuning set. The new All-American shielded straight line frequency condensers are recommended to prevent crowding of the stations on the lower waves.

Only one stage of audio frequency is provided, and if this be constructed with one of the laboratory model lyric transformers, reproduction of music and speech will be as clear and undistorted as on a one tube set.

The regenerative feature is controlled by a small variable condenser of approximately .00015 mfd. that permits the tubes to be brought gradually up to the point of oscillation, or "hot spot," where reception is best.

The Parts Needed.

Few parts are needed, and the set can be assembled with a 7 by 18 or 21-inch panel and cabinet, without crowding. Two controls, an ideal system of tuning a radio set, are used. To construct the receiver you will need the following list of parts:

One toroid coupler, type T1 (L1).

One toroid coil, type T2 (L2).

One universal coupler, type R 140 (L3).

Two straight line frequency condensers, type C35 (C1 and 2).

One variable condenser, approximately .00015 mfd. capacity (C3).

One audio transformer, type R12 (AFT 1).

One large fixed condenser, 0.5 to 1.0 mfd.

Three sockets.

One grid leak.

One .00025 mfd. grid condenser.

One 6 ohm rheostat.

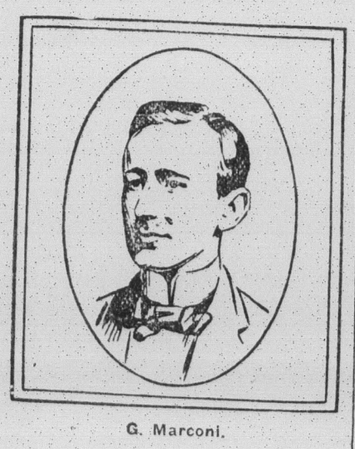
Binding posts, wire, screws, etc.

The UV199 or C299 type of tubes may be used if the rheostat is 10 to 15 ohms. One rheostat controls the three tubes and it is not advantageous to provide a separate rheostat for each tube. The 45-volt "B" battery binding post is for the detector tube, which should not be of the regular UV200 or C300 type, unless the voltage is lowered to 22½ volts.

FOREFATHERS OF RADIO

By GEORGE LEWIS
of The Crosley Radio Corporation.

No one had succeeded in demonstrating how Hertz' discoveries could be made the basis of a practical system. The waves created by Hertz' coni devoted his attention to the problem. The waves created by Hertz's crude apparatus could only be detected at short distances from the apparatus. It was necessary that two things be done before Hertz' methods could be adapted to practical wireless telegraphy: First, it was essential to devise some more powerful means of propagating the waves, and, second, a better detecting device than the simple wire loop and spark gap that he had used had to be worked out. Marconi solved both of these problems.



G. Marconi.

Very early in his experiments, Marconi made the discovery that if one electrical terminal of the transmitting or receiving apparatus were connected to the earth and the other end connected to a metal plate or wire suspended high in the air, the range over which transmission and reception could be accomplished would be multiplied many times. Marconi's earth connection is known today as the "ground," and his suspended wire or plate is what we know as an "aerial" or "antenna."

In the line of detecting devices he improved an instrument first thought of by Branly, and known as the "coherer." This instrument is a relay, enabling the feeble vibrating electric current set up in the receiving circuit by the radio waves to release current from a local battery.

By means of these improvements Marconi was able to conduct many successful demonstrations of practical wireless telegraphy in England. In 1898, permanent stations were established for communication between Alum bay and Bournemouth, England a distance of 14½ miles. A year later communication was maintained between England and France.

Farmers Great Users of Radio, Report Discloses

Radio for farm use could receive no better recommendation than the statistics found in the annual report of Secretary of Agriculture Jardine. He tells that a survey made by county agents in 1923 indicated that there were about 145,000 radio sets on farms throughout the country. In 1924 the estimated number of sets jumped to 305,000 and in 1925 to 553,000.

Radio sets per county increased from 51 in 1923 to 204 in 1925, an increase of 300 per cent. What more evidence could one wish to prove that farm folks appreciate the broadcasting service now available? Twenty-four agricultural colleges maintain radio broadcasting stations. They cooperate with the United States Department of Agriculture in broadcasting weather, crops and market reports. Several hundred stations regularly obtain information for broadcasting from the United States Department of Agriculture.

FOR THE NOTE BOOK

Put a fresh grid leak in the set about once a year.

The best solder is made of equal parts of tin and lead.

Fading is much less troublesome in daylight than at night.

Hydrometers are not used with nickel-iron storage batteries.

The ground is one of the most important portions of the radio circuit.

Crystal detectors operate as long as the detector is in good condition.

Excessive resin from solder can be removed with alcohol and a soft cloth.

Howling of a set may be due to filament too high, over-regeneration, improper wiring, or instruments crowded.

A condenser connected in series with an aerial will reduce the wave length of the aerial. One connected in parallel will raise the wave length.

A loud speaker is as delicate as the human ear.

Antenna insulators should be cleaned every six months.

Use a "C" battery to reduce the "B" battery consumption.

Static noises are worst in a set on the approach of a storm area.

LAST TRIP OF LITTLE BETSY

By HOWARD E. MORTON

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

"GET yo'self 'long, Miss Fannie. Ain't no use o' loafin'. Go 'long, Miss Fannie. Jes' looka Miss Jennie. She's done run clear 'way an' mos' pull her purty neck off. Go 'long, Miss Fannie, go 'long."

An old negro, with white hair that fell almost to his shoulders, sat on the high seat of a heavy mountain wagon, and after having thus delivered to the off leader of a twelve-mule team, relapsed into silence. Miss Fannie seemed to understand the rebuke, for she laid back her long ears, snorted resentfully and trotted along for some distance at a pace that kept her chime of bells and trace chains jingling merrily. The negro smiled approvingly and gazed aimlessly up the hot, dusty road which wound and undulated among the foothills.

Black Jim, for that was the only name he had known for nearly forty years, prided himself on his ability to handle horses and mules. His fame was known through more than one California county and for years he traveled from ranch to ranch earning a living as a horse breaker.

Finally he grew too old for so strenuous an occupation and was employed as a teamster by the big quicksilver mining company in the southern mountains of San Benito county.

On the first day of each month the quicksilver output of the New Idria mines was shipped to the metropolis. The heavy iron flasks, filled with the metallic fluid, were loaded into Black Jim's big wagon at the refinery and then Jim and his mules would clatter away through the town on a 125-mile drive to Moss Landing, on Monterey bay. The trip, down across the San Benito valley and over the range of low mountains that fringes the shore of the Pacific, usually occupied five or six days, and it was necessary to take food for himself and the animals. This was packed in a small, light rig, the tongue of which was coupled to the heavier wagon with a stout chain. Jim called his smaller vehicle Little Betsy, to distinguish it from Big Betsy, which carried the quicksilver, and in it he stowed his supply of hay and grain, blankets and teamsters' paraphernalia, besides enough provisions to suffice for the journey. At Moss Landing Jim would deliver the shipment to the captain of a little coasting schooner, who took it up to San Francisco.

It was on one of these monthly trips that Black Jim found it necessary to rebuke Miss Fannie for lagging behind her running mate.

Big Betsy rumbled briskly along for some miles and Little Betsy trailed behind with a merry staccato rattle. The road wound higher and higher among the mountains and the level floor of the San Benito valley had long since disappeared behind the foothills. It was midsummer, and the sun beat down at its fiercest. There was no breeze to stir the air and the heavy adobe dust kicked up by the mules hung in a thick, choking cloud about the outfit. Jim amused himself for a time clipping off the tops of wild flowers with the lash of his long whip, but as the heat became more and more oppressive he closed his eyes and finally drowsed.

He was awakened suddenly from his nap by a snort from the leaders, followed by a crisp command:

"Hands up!"

Jim rubbed his eyes stupidly and stared ahead through the cloud of dust. The wheel mules were humped up in their breeching, with the rest of the team backed in against them confusedly. The leaders were kicking and squealing. Again the voice said sharply:

"Hands up!" And as the dust cleared away a man with a double-barreled shotgun at his shoulder gradually took shape at the side of the road.

"Dey's up, dey's up! Put down de gun, fo' de Lawd's sake! Dey's up!" Two dark brown palms were raised skyward. The man lowered the gun and looked searchingly into the ebony face.

The man was roughly dressed and his features were masked by a thick, matted black beard that covered the face almost to the points of the cheek bones. Another man, shorter than the first, swarthy like an Indian, and hideous from the loss of an eye, emerged from behind the leaders' heads and the two held a whispered consultation. Jim sat on the high seat with upraised hands watching them covertly, his small eyes still blinking. The men conversed for a few moments and then the one with the gun advanced and propped up his foot on the spokes of the fore wheel.

"Look here—you," he said savagely, his fingers playing with the trigger of the weapon that lay across his knee, "Kin you drive this here outfit over Tucket's cut in the dark?"

Jim looked down at the shotgun and then at the one-eyed man, whose sinister orb glared at him ominously from under the dirty remnant of a Mexican sombrero.

"I ain't gone an' drain dese yere mules fo' nuthin'," was the enigmatical reply. The man below made a gesture of satisfaction.

"Well, that's what we want. Let's come to business. We've got a schooner at Goodall's old landing, 'bout ten miles above Moss. This here load of quicksilver is worth 'bout ten thousand dollars to us an' we're goin' to have it. Now, there'll be five hundred dollars in yer pocket if you haul it safe to the landing. You git yer money when we git the stuff aboard. Stand in on this deal an' you kin go back an' tell 'em you wuz held up, or any old thing. We'll be on the way to Mexico—we won't care. If you won't stand in—well—"

He patted the stock of the gun significantly and glanced at his companion, whose visage distorted itself into a horrible grin. Jim took off his hat and nervously mopped his head with a red bandana handkerchief.

"Well, what d'you say? Are you goin' to stand in an' make the five hundred, er are we goin' to throw yer corpse under the bridge an' take the team ourselves?" He impatiently jerked his thumb toward a little stream crossing the road a hundred yards ahead.

"Ef Miss Fannie an' Miss Jennie goes ober de cut, ole Jim goes too." He paused a moment and looked at the two men expressively. "I reckon de five hundred bucks doan' grow on many ob de trees round' yere, so ole Jim's goin' to make hay fer shore while de sun shines."

He smiled broadly, and in spite of the mixed metaphor involved the two seemed to understand him perfectly.

"That's the business," affirmed the man with the gun. "We don't want to have no shootin' nor nothin' like that in this job. Do we, Joe?"

Again the horrible grimace spread over the face of the man with one eye. He shook his head by way of answer, clambered into Little Betsy and stretched out at full length on the sacks of grain. The other man followed and seated himself on the pile of hay, the shotgun resting across his lap.

"Now go ahead," he commanded. Jim whistled to the leaders and the outfit moved forward once again with the jingle of trace chains and hame bells and the rumble and rattle of the tandem wagons.

It was almost dusk when they reached the point where Tucker's cut branched off from the main road. This cut was a short route over the mountains to Goodall's Landing and was little used because of the heavy grades and poor condition of the roadbed, which in some places was even dangerous. A stream crossed the road here and Jim got down to water the animals before the long ascent. The man with the gun had been nodding, but as the teams came to a standstill he woke up with a start and gripped his weapon alertly. After the thirst of the animals was satisfied Jim looked over the harness and spent considerable time adjusting the couplings which bound Little Betsy to her ponderous sister. Joe slept soundly on the grain sacks, the empty socket where his eye once had been staring upward into the gathering gloom.

Again the bells and chains jingled and the team began the climb of the cut. The road became rougher and wound in and out along the sides of the steep ravine. It was almost dark now, but the leaders picked the way, avoiding washouts and other obstructions with marvelous sagacity. Above them the black shadow of the mountain side sloped upward to the stars. On the other side, so near sometimes that the outer wheels crumbled the edge, yawned a steep canyon. Along the bottom several hundred feet below, a small stream flowed over a bed of stones and bowlders.

Several times Jim looked back over his shoulder at the two men in the rear wagon. Joe lay outstretched on the sacks, slumbering heavily. The man with the gun sat on the hay, his chin drooped forward on his breast and his head swaying from side to side, as the wheels bumped over the ruts and stones in their path. He, too, was sound asleep. Jim peered through the darkness for some time at the limp figure, then stooped and quietly wound the jerk line around a cleat on the footboard. The mules remembered their teaching and continued their steady pull up the grade. Noiselessly the negro climbed down from the high seat and crawled over the iron flasks to the rear of Big Betsy. Here he paused and listened intently. He could hear the heavy breathing of the two men only a few feet away. In a moment he slipped over the end of the heavy vehicle, and, clinging with one hand to the tailboard, deftly unwound the chain that fastened the tongue of the smaller wagon in place. Again he looked back into the darkness and listened. He could see the faint outline of the man sitting upright and back of that the dark figure on the sacks. With a quick tug he loosed the last loop of the chain and shoved the tongue backward and outward with all the strength in his black arm.

Little Betsy hovered for an instant on the edge of the descent and then with a creak toppled over into the canyon. An awful shriek came up through the darkness, and then the air was filled with the sound of breaking wood and metal as the mass shot, end over end, down the rocky declivity. A miniature avalanche of stones and dirt rattled down into the creek bed, and the surrounding mountains and ravines sent back an echo of that blood-curdling human cry. Then all was silent.

The mules stopped, trembling in their tracks. Black Jim slowly mounted to the high seat and mopped his forehead with the red bandana.

"I rickon Old Jim ain't goin' ter get hung fo' doin' his duty by de boss," he murmured reflectively as he glanced down into the blackness of the canyon. The jerk line whisked sharply, the hame bells and trace chains jingled and Big Betsy moved up the grade again into the night.

THE HOG DEER

"All my life I will have a sorrow," said the Hog Deer.

"And all my life I have had a sorrow. I have always had it because I was born with it, and I will never lose it, and so I will die with it.

"Ah, sad is my life, sad, sad, indeed."

"Whatever has got into you?" asked the Sinaloa White-Tailed Deer.

"I have nothing in me," said the Hog Deer.

"That is, I haven't had a thing in me since breakfast time.

"I should have something in me before long, though.

"I am feeling a bit empty. But oh dear, oh dear, if I say that, everyone will remark:

"'Just like your old namesake.'

"Mercy, gracious me, life is truly sad!"

And the Hog Deer wept a tear from each of his two beautiful brown eyes as he gazed at the Sinaloa White-Tailed Deer in the next yard.

Now the Sinaloa White-Tailed Deer had come from South America and was very delicate.

His tail was of white and his antlers or horns were very small.

His cousin, the northern White-Tailed Deer was very much stronger.

"Tell me what is the trouble with you," begged the Sinaloa White-Tailed Deer, named Whitey for short.

"When I said you must have got something into you, I didn't mean food, but some sort of a sad thought."

"That's it," said the Hog Deer. "I have a sad thought. Yes, I've a sad thought in my mind.

"I will give you my tale. Here it is."

"Tail, tail, why are you going to give me your tail? I have my white one, thanks.

"It will really do nicely.

"I don't need another. I didn't know you'd be able to spare it.

"But even if you can, I really do not want it."

"Oh, how many creatures are always getting mixed up about these two words that sound alike.

Not Like a Hog.

"I meant the kind of tale which is a story. That is the kind I am going to give you."

"Oh," said Whitey, "I understand now.

"So please continue. For the moment I was startled."

"I will tell you now.

"They call me the Hog Deer.

"I am small and dainty and I have nothing about me which is like a hog.

"I am not greedy.

"I am supposed to be very pretty, my long antlers are well-shaped with six handsome points.

"In the summer I often have beautiful spots with which to adorn myself, though often I don't bother about them.

"We behave well both in India where our home is, and in the zoo where we are sometimes to be found.

"But I'm not like a hog, and there is no reason for my name.

"It's a cruel injustice.

"And if I'm hungry I'm so afraid they'll think I have a piggish nature.

"Oh dear, to be called a hog and yet to be sweet and unselfish!"

"Cheer up," said Whitey, "for the keeper tells everyone he can that your name means nothing at all, nothing at all."

And the Hog Deer felt happier.

SUMMER DAYTIME FROCKS, NECKWEAR LEADS FOR SPRING

"PRETTY" and "Practical"—united they stand and divided they fall—in the requirements that spell success for daytime or sports frocks. The most athletic of young persons looks with disdain upon sports togs that have no charm of styling, no matter how practical they may be for her needs. It is the same with daytime dresses of all sorts; even in house dresses prettiness and good style are just as essential as durability and comfort.

We have with us this spring—morning, noon or night, for every character of dress, the two-piece mode. It is one of the new whims for evening wear, but finds its best expression in daytime and sports frocks. All the pretty printed fabrics are made up in skirt and jumper styles, often with printed and plain goods combined. Plain skirts with printed blouses, for summer days and resort wear, have taken on new interest because of new colors and novel patterns in printed silks and other printed fabrics. Skirts of plain materials are either plaited or plain, or show the introduction of plaits at the sides—perhaps at only one side. The jumper dress in printed materials, is a promising aspirant for favor and is shown here in a printed crepe with ribbon tie. In some of the plaited skirt and printed blouse combinations, very high colors are used in the skirts, as bright red, yellow or blue, with blouses printed in harmonizing colors. But there are others in pastel colors, as light pink, blue, lavender, that are just as good style. There is a casual style about the two-piece mode that makes it informal and ideal for summer afternoons.

Smart tailleurs are everywhere topped by novel, arresting collars, ties, brooches, and, above all, scarfs. They catch the eye first and may be considered the seal of fashion's approval set on the new tailored suits or tailored frocks of wool for spring. Modistes tell us that all accessories are important, but when we observe what has happened to collars and scarfs, ties and vestees, there remains no doubt that neckwear is most important.

The tailored suit may restrain itself as to color and remain demurely dark (or it may not), but leave it to the small and vivid scarf, tied up closely about the neck, to provide a gleam of brilliant color. Touches of red and gold are introduced in the collars of dark frocks in braid, or nail heads and buckles may supply the gold touch. Collars of silver with gold buttons are used in the same way or soft collars made of two colors in crepe are further brightened by embroidery in a third color.

When the tailored suit is worn with a matching blouse, or a lingerie neck finish is preferred for suit or frock, then the bright hued scarf steps in, as the representative of the mode in proper neck finishing for street or sports wear. The hat and scarf to match are presented in great variety for wear with tailleurs, and sports clothes, but the independent scarf is most popular. After it come new collar and cuff sets, more dainty and effective than ever, and many collar and vestee combinations in fine nets and laces, that will make the spring tailored suit as dainty as it should be.

In the company of these new fineries and more expressive of spring than any of them, are the new boutonnieres—clusters of fruit blossoms, garden flowers and little nosegays of dear and familiar posies—all pointing the way to a triumphant reentry of the tailored mode.

But if the proud possessor of a new tailored suit chooses to pass up a gay scarf or the dainty boutonniere, she may look to the new vestees to give her quiet garb a touch of youthful dash. These are shown in plaids and other bold patterns and are very new. The white vestee has also made its appearance in the wake of tailored suits.

REAL ART IN MAKING GOOD STEW OF MEAT

Dish Has Been Lifted From Depths of Ill Repute.

The old boarding-house wheeze about stew and its uncertain ingredients has gone by the boards. This lowly dish has been lifted from the depths of ill repute and is now rubbing elbows with the aristocratic steak and chop.

There really is art in stew making according to Inez S. Willson, home economics director of the national live stock and meat board. Miss Willson is appearing before audiences of housewives in various cities, giving them first-hand information on how to master this art, together with information on meat selection, purchase, preparation, how to distinguish quality in meats, and other subjects.

The occasion for this is a series of "Housewives' Meat Schools" being conducted under the joint supervision of the national live stock and meat board, the United States Department of Agriculture, and Ohio State university.

Inez S. Willson, Director, Department of Home Economics, National Live Stock and Meat Board.

Appearing with Miss Willson as lecturers are A. T. Edinger of the department, and Paul Gerlaugh of the university faculty.

Schools of one week each already have been held in Cleveland, Ohio, Columbus, Ohio, and Syracuse, N. Y. The itinerary for the future includes a number of others. A serious lack of meat knowledge on the part of the housewife is given as the chief incentive for this meat missionary work. A recent government survey revealed the startling fact that the average housewife is familiar with only two or three steaks, and can recognize less than two roasts.

A statement issued by the agencies sponsoring the program says that the splendid success attending it has been attained through co-operation with women's clubs, boards of education, chambers of commerce, parent-teachers' associations and other local educational and welfare organizations.

Successful Floor Waxing

Success in waxing floors lies in applying the wax in thin coats and rubbing a great deal. One pound will coat about 250 square feet of floor. After the preliminary coats of filler or varnish are thoroughly dry the wax should be rubbed on with a woolen cloth, a piece of old carpet or a brush, and allowed to harden overnight. The next morning the floor should be polished lengthwise of the grain with a weighted brush or a heavy block wrapped in woolen cloth, burlap or old carpet. Then one or perhaps two more coats of wax should be applied and rubbed down in the same way as the first.

GET AHEAD WITH SPRING SEWING

Plan Ahead What to Buy or Make for Family.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Early in April your family will begin to need wash dresses and other cool clothes. You will probably be inspired to take stock of what is on hand for each person in the household, and to plan in advance what must be bought or made to complete their various wardrobes. Dresses that seemed scarcely affected by last year's sun when you put them away, will look discouragingly faded when you take them out. And the children have an unfailing habit of adding to the length of their legs every winter, so that Mary's dresses have to go down to Jane, and Jane's must be given away to some still smaller child. After you have let down all the hems that can be let down, and made all the changes that allow for longer or plumper arms, bigger necks or chests, you will know what materials you actually have to buy and make up.

Let us suppose that you are anxious to produce the children's school clothes and the house dresses you will need this season with the least possible interruption to other tasks. You can make every minute count if you plan, and use what might be termed the wholesale method in sewing. This consists of doing a great deal of one kind of work before changing one's motions to another kind, acquiring speed as one goes along.

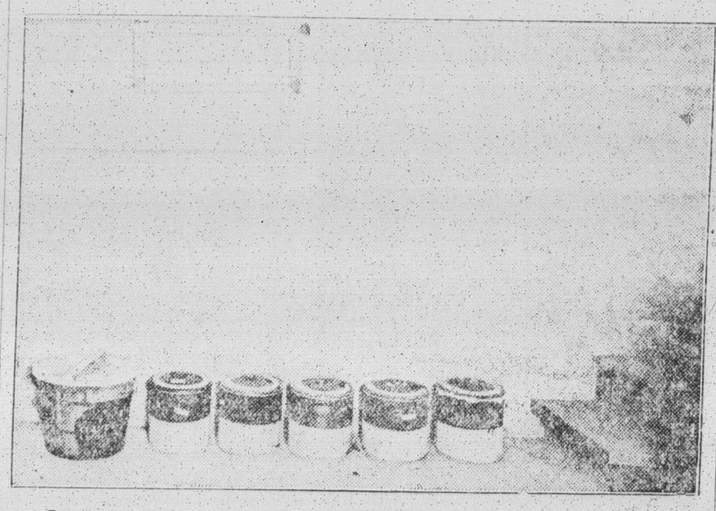
First provide a good foundation pattern to fit each one who needs new clothes. This may be a commercial pattern of simple design, or one you have made according to measurements. With a little practice in using such a pattern you can cut from it very rapidly, and vary the trimming so as to seem to have many different designs. You don't want to dress your family in a uniform, of course, but in making underwear if you buy enough goods of the same kind to make several garments you will use the goods to better advantage and save time in handling it.

Cut as many garments out at one time as you can. Pin the parts of each securely together with the scraps that match, or put it in a box by itself. When you have cut even one dress by a given pattern the next can be cut a great deal faster, because you know how to place the pattern on the material in the best way. While you are cutting these dresses out, don't forget to allow hems twice as deep as you need. This extra material is convenient when the time comes to lengthen the dress.

The next part of your work is the machine stitching. Most wash materials have body enough and are so smoothly and firmly woven, that you can stitch many parts of your garments directly on the machine without basting. Don't stitch a seam or two, and then stop to turn, trim, or baste. That is a slow method. Stitch straight through the entire lot you have cut out, until you can do no more without folding or basting. Keep the parts of each garment together. Next go through all the garments, trimming, pressing fells, putting in gathers, or whatever has to be done, until all the dresses are ready for more machine work. By the time you have stitched them once more you will have plenty of "pick-up" work on hand, to be done in odd minutes. There will be binding and buttonholes and pockets, sleeves, hems, collars, and other finishing work, much of which must be in part done by hand.

Just one more hint to the mother who makes many little garments: buy a lot of the same kind of buttons—a stock design, easy to duplicate—and always keep a reserve card on hand. Then you won't have to hunt to match the buttons that come off, and little dresses will always look neat.

PRESERVE EGGS FOR HOUSEHOLD PURPOSES



Preserve Eggs in Water Glass and Store in Cool Place in Basement.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Fresh eggs, properly preserved, in water glass or lime solution, may be kept from six to ten months and be almost as good for all household purposes as fresh eggs, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Place a large crock of earthenware or stone in a cool dry place where it can remain without being moved until all the eggs are used. The five-gallon size is convenient. Boil a sufficient amount of water to fill the crock and allow it to cool. Measure out nine quarts of this boiled water, place in the crock, and add one quart of sodium silicate, commonly called water glass, which can be purchased at almost any drug store. Mix the solution thoroughly. More of the solution as needed may be added from time to time in the same proportions.

Eggs may be put in all at once or as they are obtained. Care should be taken in putting them in the jar not to crack or break the shells; and the solution should cover the eggs by at least two inches at all times. Cover the jar with a tight lid or waxed paper to prevent evaporation and keep out dirt.

MIDDLE AGE BRINGS NEW INTERESTS

For Women in Good Health

MRS. HARVEY TUCKER
408 WALKER STREET, SHELBYVILLE, IND.

"Grow old along with me,
The best is yet to be"

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women of middle age, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Those who have learned through their own experience the merit of this dependable medicine are enthusiastic in recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

"I had been in bad condition for three months. I could not do my work. One day I read what your medicine had done and just had a feeling that it would help me, so I sent and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had only taken half a bottle when I got up and started to do my work. It gave me an appetite, and helped me wonderfully. I can not praise this medicine highly enough. I surely will advise all women and girls to take it, and they don't have to use rouge to look healthy. My two daughters are taking it now and one is also using the Sanative Wash. I am willing to have you use this testimonial and I will answer letters from women asking about the medicine."—Mrs. Harvey Tucker, 408 Walker St., Shelbyville, Indiana.

"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the little books you give away and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel better and could eat better and had fewer headaches. I feel like a different person. At anytime that I don't feel good I take the Vegetable Compound again, as I always keep a bottle on hand. You may use this letter for every word is true. I will answer any letters sent to me."—Mrs. Jennie Bollerman, 516 Smith St., West Hoboken, N. J.

A young English engineer who has good reason to feel proud of himself is John W. Gibson, the man who was mainly responsible for the building of the great Senar dam, in Egypt, the largest dam in the world. Mr. Gibson, who is not much over thirty, is very modest. Before he went to Egypt he helped to build the new Queen Mary reservoir, the largest work of its kind in Great Britain. He also constructed some of the largest docks in the United Kingdom.

On City Screen And Stage

Balboa Theater

Harry Langdon, First National comedy king, engages in a transcontinental walking race in "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," his initial feature-length comedy for First National release. The picture comes to the Balboa theatre Saturday.

The story of "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," is an original one with Harry and one which he has had in mind for many years. The theme permits of innumerable comedy episodes.

According to the story, Harry enters a walking race sponsored by a prominent shoe manufacturer in order to lift the mortgage from the house. The real reason, however, is to win the hand of the daughter of the manufacturer. He has fallen in love with her picture on the billboards that adorn all the highways.

After a series of harrowing experiences in which he encounters almost all the misfortunes that can possibly fall to the lot of a cross-country walker, he crosses the line a winner. Harry promptly lifts the mortgage and marries the beautiful girl.

One of the most exciting and diverting episodes in "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," is a cyclone scene. An entire township is blown off the map by this cyclone. Cameramen taking the scene had to be lashed to trees and posts in order to prevent being blown away.

A staff of ace gag-men aided Director Edwards. The cast comprises Joan Crawford, Tom Murray, Edward Davis, Brooks Benedict and Alec Francis.

On the stage will be one of the largest Fanchon and Marco productions ever seen here, featuring Walter Weems, internationaly famed vaudeville headliner, and a company of forty people. Included in the cast are Arnold Graser, dancer; Victoria Regal, Broadway star; Elaine Tickner, vocalist; Dorothy Gilbert, dancing comedienne, Gwendolyn Evans and the Sunkist Beauties.

There will be a three-reel novelty "Primitive Love" and special musical selections by George Stollberg and the Balboa Music Master. Advt.

Cabrillo Theater

Two weary looking men walked into a Los Angeles street mission in the city of Angels several months ago, hardly noticed, for they were but two of a hundred or more who were seeking shelter in Brother Tom's place. Brother Tom is one of those rare men who know how to spend their money and get the best results with it. He is busy saving bodies as well as preaching the salvation of souls.

For several hours, the two strangers mingled with the motley crowd at Brother Tom's. Outside the mission again, they jumped into a Rolls-Royce waiting nearby, and began tearing off the fake beards which hid their identity.

One was Harold Lloyd and the other Ted Wilde, one of his production staff. It was not a lark for Lloyd or Wilde, which led the two to disguise themselves on their visit to Brother Tom's place, but an earnest desire to obtain atmosphere for the comedian's first Paramount release, appropriately entitled, "For Heaven's Sake!"

Part of this new Lloyd comedy is laid in a mission in the underworld of a big city, and it was to get local color for this sequence that brought Lloyd to "the other half" of Los Angeles. Several days later, the bespectacled comedian went down again and engaged a number of characters who frequent the place for the mission scenes in "For Heaven's Sake!" Consequently, even the most captious critic will have no fault to find with the atmosphere in this production, for it is absolutely faithful to the locale.

"For Heaven's Sake!" details Lloyd's thrilling and laughable experiences when he starts out to uplift the gangsters and toughs in the slum section of his city. Jobyna Ralston supplies the necessary love interest to the plot, while Paul Wiegel, Noah Young and James Mason are among the prominent supporting players.

The picture, which comes to the Balboa theatre Saturday was direted by Sam Taylor from the story by Ted Wilde, John Gray and Clyde Bruckman. Advt.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON SAVING TO INVEST

"You have talked so much about saving, Aunt Emmy," said Hilda to Aunt Emmy, "that I wonder if you will be kind enough to help Jack and me work out a way to save regularly. We do so want to get ahead. As Jack is getting a little more money this year, we plan to save that and keep right on living on what we got last year. Of course, it is hard to do without a lot of things we might have, but then Jack and I both feel that we don't want to be worried about money. If we have a little reserve fund, we can be prepared for emergencies."

"Bless my heart!" exclaimed Aunt Emmy. "It surely does sound good to hear such sensible talk from a youngster these days! I'll tell you what I think is a good plan for you to follow,—open a savings account with a bank that has a thrift department and every week put away a stated sum in your savings account. You will receive interest on this money, you know. Of course you receive only a moderate rate of interest on your savings, so it is a good idea to make a definite investment plan and invest your savings in sound securities that will yield a higher rate of interest.

"Accumulate your money, small sums at a time, in your thrift or savings account. Determine what sum you will use for your initial investment, say, $100 or $500. Save until you have twice that amount. If you decide to begin your investment on $100 save $200, then take $100 and buy a baby bond, or buy a large bond on the installment plan and apply the $100 on the first payment, if you are sure you can save regularly enough to meet the other payments."

"Why not use the $200 and then begin all over again, Aunty?" queried Hilda.

"Because you ought to have some money on hand. You don't want to wipe out your whole savings, even for the best sort of investment."

"But how can we know what to invest in?" asked Hilda.

"Your bank will help you in that, my dear. Bankers are always glad to advise their customers concerning sound investments."—Anne B. Aymes.

IT'S PAINLESS

Egotism is the anaesthetic administered by nature to deaden the pain of being a fool.—New York Commercial.

IT'S A FACT

THAT advertising is the best force to use in order to attract attention to your business.

THAT continuous advertising is the power that brings steady business.

THAT only the continuous advertisers take the lead in the business world. Non-advertisers simply lag behind, little known and soon forgotten.

THAT it is a well known fact that business comes where it is invited and stays where it is well treated. If you don't invite busines by advertising you should not expect much of it.

THAT business concerns that advertise reap the favor and confidence of the public.

THAT business concerns that invite business by truthful advertising grow in popularity.

IT COSTS LESS TO SELL ADVERTISED GOODS. TRYING TO SELL GOODS WITHOUT THE AID OF ADVERTISING MEANS LOST TIME, LOST EFFORT AND LOST MONEY.

TO THOSE WHO DO NOT KNOW ABOUT YOUR BUSINESS, IT DOES NOT EXIST; THE PEOPLE ARE FORGETFUL. IT TAKES CONTINUOUS ADVERTISING TO MAKE PEOPLE KNOW YOUR BUSINESS AND NOT FORGET IT.

Do You Know?

THAT this newspaper is officially legalized for the publication of CERTIFICATES OF INDIVIDUAL FICTITIOUS NAMES and any and all kinds of LEGAL NOTICES. The attention is particularly requested of beach business folks who believe in the patronage of home industry. Dollars and dimes sent away are gone beyond recall.

JACK HARRINGTON OPENS FRUIT MARKET ON HIGHWAY

Direct from the grower to the consumer is the service that Jack Harrington furnishes the patrons of his newly opened fruit market, corner Moore and Wright streets, on the highway route to San Diego. Mr. Harrington is well known in Ocean Beach, where he established the Omaha Market on Newport avenue about three years ago. He inaugurated his new market yesterday very successfully with a large stock of the finest and freshest fruit direct from the growers.
